

Where did you find your example(s)? How was the example used? What classifications were used? How does the combination function?

I found my example on my desk, this is from my brother's collection, all the text on this card is using the "ITC Serif Gothic" which also falls under the classification of a sans serif, and this works for how the cards are laid out as the name is displayed in a larger font to make it stand out and small for what the card does and the font helps, especially with how the text itself just stands out for how different it looks giving it an odd feeling towards it.
