Progress Report 3

As the culmination project nears completion in this semester's third phase, the focus has been on refining the existing footage of Central Park, the voiceover, and the interview footage. Editing these crucial elements has presented challenges, primarily centered around improving the sound quality to ensure a polished final product.

Admittedly, grappling with sound quality during the editing process has proven to be a significant hurdle. The technical adviser has played a pivotal role in guiding the refinement of the footage editing process. I have integrated several suggested improvements to enhance the overall coherence and impact of the footage. Furthermore, I have meticulously examined each frame of the Central Park footage, scrutinizing every detail to ensure that the visuals align seamlessly with the overarching theme and message of the project.

Through these concerted efforts, I remain optimistic about the prospects of presenting a polished Culmination Project. With a steadfast resolve to tackle the challenges posed by sound and a firm commitment to incorporating the technical adviser's recommendations, I am confident in the final presentation's success.
