Dear Ms. Radioli,

Ms. Wendy Thompson RN is my student in the clinical portion of the Urban Nursing Course at New York City College of Technology, BSN program. The site is Masaryk Towers a six building Mitchell-Lama complex in the lower eastside of Manhattan. If any clinical embodies the concepts and issues of urban nursing it definitely is one of the best examples.

Ms. Thompson RN has shown sensitivity and flexibility of role which is of extreme importance in such a setting, as well as cultural awareness, the site having a large Asian population. Ms. Thompson did assessments and health teaching but also a follow up visit in the home to one of the most frail status post hurricane Sandy evaluating the adequacy of care and recommending additional interventions, with referrals being made. She also co-authored an outstanding paper on breast cancer which will be edited for the Masaryk Towers newsletter's health letter section which was started by City Tech students. She presented some of the relevant points to consumers for part of the health education expectation of the clinical experience.

Ms. Thompson has shown maturity and professionalism, with a pleasant demeanor engaging those she encounters. Her relationship with her classmates was also an indication of this very positive relatedness. She is very eager to move on in her career, gaining knowledge and skills. I am very certain that she will do well in the residency program and laud its conception and existence.

Sincerely,

Dear Sir/Madame"

I am writing to you at this time concerning a former student of mine, Ms. Wendy Thompson.

Ms. Thompson was enrolled in my Latin American music course during the fall of 2011. I found her to be an excellent and conscientious student. Ms. Thompson had always read and absorbed the chapters to be prepared for each class; and was able to contribute to each session in a positive and constructive manner.

I also found that Ms. Thompson had excellent writing skills; and the papers that she turned in were thoughtful and well-written. She also did quite well on the exams that were given during the course of the semester.

Ms. Thompson possesses a calm, pleasant and professional demeanor: which is important in the nursing profession.

Speaking as the daughter of a retired registered nurse (who received the highest grade of all of the nurses who took the state boards in Georgia in 1947!), and as an individual who grew up around nurses: it is my firm belief that Ms. Wendy Thompson has the potential to become an excellent and compassionate nurse. It is also my belief that she is would be a wonderful addition to your program.

Sincerely,
