

Time Capsule

September 9, 2021- I wrote a time capsule to myself for the end of the semester.

Hey Miriam!

It's funny that writing a time capsule to myself is an assignment because I do it all the time anyway. First, I'd like to say I'm so proud of you just for getting this far. You never thought you would even make it to college and here you are. Right now, it's your second week of college and it is going great. I hope that this class was able to help with your reading and writing. I know that English class has always been your hardest subject in the past. My goals for this year would be to 1. Take an extra step to understand everything in class so I don't get lost. 2. Read a book other than for school. I know you hate books but books higher a person's vocabulary and that would be helpful for you. 3. Work a lot on the Toolwire app. It seems to be very useful. 4. Don't let the stress get to me. Miriam, I hope you were able to fulfill your goals and more. A pitfall you may have run into is not understanding the task or not knowing anything to write in the assignment. I'm sure you were able to figure it out with the help of your professor and classmates. Now, we can use the writing you learned from this class and finally manage to write a resume, a college-looking essay, and be able to write eloquently in my future endeavors. The first photo you chose is a picture of your cat, Lulu Garfield. She has been there since you were 13, through all those teenage years, and now through college. I know you'd appreciate seeing this photo of her when reading this time capsule. The second photo you chose is the quote you've been trying to go by since you were younger.

November 13, 2021- My end of the semester response.

Hey Miriam! You have completed all your goals and more. Thankfully, I was able to achieve and get my work done. I am still failing on reading books on my own time, but this class has helped me tremendously, and I was able to complete all Toolwire games with 100%. I did hit my pitfall a couple of times, but I followed rule number four, and I did not let the stress get to me. I am very proud of how far you've come, and now I am certain you can make it through college. What I have taken from this class is confidence in my writing skills.
